Clinician Partners Program
Alzheimer's Disease Research Center
Washington University, St. Louis

The Clinician Partners Program (CPP) is part of the Alzheimer's Disease Research Center's (ADRC) Rural Outreach initiative funded by the National Institute on Aging (P50-AG05681). The CPP is structured as a "mini-residency" for health professionals who serve older adults living in rural areas of Missouri. The primary goal of the CPP is to enhance local dementia-related diagnosis and care by educating a select group of clinicians in up-to-date diagnostic and treatment techniques. An important emphasis of the CPP is early detection and treatment of Alzheimer's disease.
